

Medical Emoji: Microsoft Product and Legal Clearance

Prepared: July 12, 2026

Prepared by: Shuhan He

Status: Internal approval worksheet. Nothing below is approved until the responsible Microsoft owner signs it.

Decision record

Selected concept: ☐ Ultrasound ☐ CT Scan ☐ NeitherReview outcome: ☐ Approved with the conditions below ☐ Revise and return ☐ Do not advance

Ultrasound may be selected only after its four missing Google screenshots are embedded and its monitor-plus-probe image passes the 18 x 18 pixel and black-and-white review. If those gates do not close by the internal cutoff, the team may select CT Scan only after its historical evidence, current factor labels, and the submitter's explicit ownership warranty are refreshed.

Product and design clearance

- ☐ The selected image is recognizable at 18 x 18 and 72 x 72 pixels in color and true black and white.
- ☐ The paradigm is generic, text-free, and not dependent on Microsoft trade dress or a protected logo.
- ☐ Ultrasound does not read as a generic computer and is not limited to pregnancy; or CT Scan remains visually distinct from X-Ray.
- ☐ Accessibility and internationalization reviewers found no avoidable ambiguity or culturally narrow cue.
- ☐ Any statement about anticipated Microsoft implementation has a named product owner and exact approved wording.

Product/design conditions or required changes:

Legal and communications clearance

- ☐ The final artwork source, creator, and license record have been verified. No third-party search image or screenshot is represented as original artwork.
- ☐ The public proposal may include the required third-party usage screenshots under a documented evidentiary/fair-use rationale.
- ☐ No private Microsoft data, internal metrics, trademarks, customer information, or confidential material will appear in the public packet without separate approval.
- ☐ Shuhan He remains the sole preparer and individual submitter. No Microsoft employee is named as an author, sponsor, or approver without that person's express consent.
- ☐ The proposal does not imply that Microsoft can direct Unicode's technical outcome.

Legal/communications conditions or required changes:

Optional public statement

Select one:

- ☐ No Microsoft statement is authorized for the proposal.
- ☐ The exact statement below is authorized without modification.

Microsoft has reviewed the proposed [Ultrasound / CT Scan] image paradigm for technical feasibility. If Unicode encodes and recommends the character for general interchange as emoji, Microsoft anticipates evaluating implementation through its normal product, design, accessibility, legal, and release processes. This statement does not request preferential treatment or pre-judge Unicode's technical review.

Any stronger implementation commitment requires separate written approval.
